The Importance of Letting Go

By Charlene Thurston, RN, ANP, Program Director

In our spring newsletter, I wrote about how patients and families could make the decision to stop treatment and allow natural death, especially important when serious illness so compromised the patient’s quality of life that life felt no longer worth living. After writing that article, I realized that an additional article needed to be written to help families understand the importance of allowing their loved ones to let go, to give them permission to let go and die when it was their time. This is such a hard thing for families to do because we want to keep our loved ones with us as long as possible; but it is so important.

So often we see very, very ill patients struggling and suffering because they don’t want to let their families down. This can become very difficult as their bodies don’t have the energy to persevere. As hard as it is, as family members, we must come to terms with our own pain of grief and not impose our needs on the patient who is so fragile and vulnerable and needing to be released. Patients try to take care of their loved ones, even during their dying, so if loved ones are clinging and holding on, the dying person keeps trying to hold on for them until they feel they’ll be okay and can give them permission to go.

When we’re working with patients and families through this period, we try to help them prepare to let go by completing their relationships in a meaningful way. Ira Byock, MD, a highly respected physician in the hospice and palliative care field, wrote a book, “The Four Things that Matter Most,” and we try to help our patients and families by following those teachings. They can be summed up as saying...

A Letter from Outgoing Program Director Charlene Thurston

As I write my final newsletter as the Program Director of Palliative & Supportive Care of Nantucket, I’m reminded of all the wonderful years I’ve had serving in this role, and all of the truly amazing people I’ve met throughout this time. All of our patients and families have touched my life in ways they’d never imagine. Though I was there to help them, what I’ve received from them was even more profound. While my role was to offer them comfort and support along their often very painful journeys, I learned so much from them. I learned how people can come face to face with intense sadness and despair, yet persevere and grow strong again, even when death is the outcome. I learned that the human spirit is so much more resilient than we ever imagined; that even in the face of tremendous adversity, we can adapt, and cope, and heal. I’ve also learned that all people are good and loving and caring, even when they do things that hide those qualities. And that we still have a caring and generous community, even amidst all the growth and changes; a community of people who are always there for each other, who rally around those in need, and who share their love and their resources to help those in need carry on. It has been a privilege for me to be allowed into the lives of patients and families we’ve served during these very intimate moments and I’m deeply grateful.

Leaving would be much more difficult if I hadn’t found an exceptional person to assume this role as my successor. Many of you may...

Swim Across America

Another terrific Island Swim took place August 25th, thanks to the dedicated efforts of event co-chairs Jim Pignato and Jill Roethke, their committee, and hundreds of swimmers, volunteers, and donors! So many people turned out to show their support for this amazing annual event which raises funds for cancer treatment and care through both PASCON and Nantucket Cottage Hospital. Their grand total exceeded expectations with over $435,000! PASCON and the entire community are so grateful to everyone involved.

We’d like to give special recognition to our own PASCON Team’s top fundraisers who went above and beyond, raising over $18,000 between them.

Marla Ceely Lamb Fund

When a family member, friend, or neighbor receives a cancer diagnosis, one of the things they can count on to lighten their burden is the Marla Ceely Lamb Fund. Thanks to a generous community, the fund continues to provide financial assistance for off-island treatment.

On behalf of the 50 cancer patients served over the last 6 months since our spring newsletter, we want to whole-heartedly thank the generous supporters who keep this fund available:

- Meredith Lamb, Faregrounds, volunteers, and everyone who donated items and services for the Annual Fundraiser happening tomorrow!
- Akimbo Beads & Things whose weekly earring making class created 500 pairs for donation to the fund
- Jules Embry Pelrine who raised $2,500 with his 6th Annual 24 Hour Run over Columbus Day weekend
- Nantucket Whaler teams and coaches, Nantucket Booster Club, and donors contributing to the Play in Pink Games throughout October
- Quidley & Co. and artists contributing to the Stroll Art Show
- Dorothy Harrison Egan Foundation
- families who made the fund a beneficiary
- unsolicited individual gifts
- Poets Corner Press
- Hyline Cruises

The Marla Ceely Lamb Fund is managed and administered by PASCON so that every dollar raised and donated can go directly to patient travel expenses.

“I love you”; “I’m sorry - please forgive me”; “I forgive you”; and “Thank you”.
Ultimately, we try to help people say “Good-bye - We love you, we’ll miss you, but, when you’re ready to go, do so, knowing that we’ll be ok.” We’ve found that helping people come together in this way brings much peace of mind to both patients and their families.
When there are loved ones who live far away or, for other reasons, won’t be able to return to see the person who is dying, we encourage families to arrange a way for them to say their good-bye’s by phone, letter, or email, so that their relationships can be completed. This has great value for both patients and their loved ones. Even in the final moments, a phone can be held to the patient’s ear and the words can be said.
Helping children say their good-bye’s in some way is also extremely important. This is very difficult for families. However, preparing children for the fact that the patient is very ill and will die soon, and giving them a way to visit, if they’d like to, or helping them express their love or good-bye in some other way, like through a note, drawing, or phone, etc., allows them to prepare for the loss and to feel included in the family. There are many helpful websites that can provide guidance. The American Cancer Society’s section on helping children when a family member has cancer has excellent suggestions for helping children and is appropriate for any illness, not just cancer.
How we end our relationships when faced with death is one of the most important things we can do. It will greatly impact both how peaceful the patient can feel in the dying process, and how his or her loved ones will carry on for the rest of their lives. Taking the opportunity to let each other know how much we’ve meant to one another, what we’ve given to one another, how much we forgive one another, and how we’ll remember and move on to live our lives is the gift that can be given and received when death comes from terminal illness. It’s the opportunity that is greatly missed when a loved one dies from a sudden fatal illness or accident since in those cases, there was no time to prepare.
A poem that has brought comfort to many families when a loved one has died is included here in the hope that it might bring comfort to our readers.

Gone from my Sight
- Henry van Dyke

I am standing upon the seashore. A ship, at my side, spreads her white sails to the moving breeze and starts for the blue ocean. She is an object of beauty and strength. I stand and watch her until, at length, she hangs like a speck of white cloud just where the sea and sky come to mingle with each other.
Then, someone at my side says, 'There, she is gone'

Gone where?
Gone from my sight. That is all. She is just as large in mast, hull and spar as she was when she left my side. And, she is just as able to bear her load of living freight to her destined port.

Her diminished size is in me - not in her.

And, just at the moment when someone says, 'There, she is gone,' there are other eyes watching her coming, and other voices ready to take up the glad shout, 'Here she comes!'

And that is dying ...

Death comes in its own time, in its own way. Death is as unique as the individual experiencing it.

remember Dianne Pitman, a nurse practitioner who worked in Dr. Tim Lepore’s practice for several years until she left about ten years ago to marry and live in Virginia. Now she’s Dianne Bein and, for the past 8 years, has worked for Blue Ridge Hospice, a large hospice in Virginia. I’d heard over the years from Tim that Dianne has always loved Nantucket and hoped to return, so, last fall, when I considered that I might like to retire from this position this year, I asked her whether she’d be interested in returning and was delighted to hear that she was. We’ve had Dianne working with us now since June, so that we might have a very smooth transition, and she’s brought her excellent skills and loving presence to all our patients. I stepped down just two weeks ago, but am not leaving the island, so will be able to answer any questions that might arise. Meanwhile, I am confident that the program will be in excellent hands. We are so fortunate to have someone with Dianne’s skills, compassion, and love for the island take on this position!
Funded by the Palliative & Supportive Care of Nantucket Foundation, the palliative & supportive care program is operated as a department of the Nantucket Cottage Hospital, which is an affiliate of Massachusetts General Hospital, and a member of Partners HealthCare, Inc. Palliative and Supportive Care is a specialized health care program, dedicated to providing excellent physical, psychological, social, and spiritual care to persons with life-threatening illness and their families.
